Chicago Landmark

Hutchinson Street District

This district contains a number of houses designed by George Maher, an architect who was influenced by the Prairie school. The mixture of Prairie and historical revival styles here provides a perspective on the changes that took place in residential architecture between 1890 and 1920, and the way those changes were reflected in Maher's work.

Designated a Chicago Landmark on August 31, 1977
by the City Council of Chicago.
Michael A. Bilandic, Mayor.
